

Kansas Earth Partnership for Schools Has Been Facilitated by Dyck Arboretum of the Plains from 2006-Present

Entire schools – students, staff, and community members – can participate in changing their school grounds into a learning landscape.

Earth Partnership for Schools (EPS) is making its ever-growing mark in Kansas. The message is clear – get kids outside and in touch with their natural surroundings and teach them about the prairie and natural history of Kansas. To date, 292 teachers from 86 schools/entities trained through summer and winter EPS Institutes at the Dyck Arboretum are becoming transformed by a unique curriculum. They regularly remark that this institute provides some of the most inspiring training they have ever received. These passionate educators are also passing this infectious energy along to their students by the thousands. Students learn about the prairie and its plant species, get dirty planting them on school grounds, enjoy the wildlife attracted to them, and so much more.

Continuing Impact...

If each teacher influences 25 students per year with EPS, teaches a new class each fall, and new teachers are trained each year, the cumulative reach of EPS in Kansas becomes staggering: 850 students in 2007 . . . and up over 51,000 in 2019. A “pyramid scheme” for ecological restoration? Let’s just call it the power of the prairie.
